R. K. Lemmons-Weber : Children of the Mud before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Children of the Mud:

Poignant, heart wrenching, direct, and controversial, Children of the Mud will rouse you to respond to the fight of injustice as it creatively examines the depth of race, racism, and lost in this finely crafted piece. The reader is transported through time with pieces written from the 1970s to modern day.

About the Author My name is Rashida Lemmons-Weber; I am an Indie Author (my published pieces are under the pseudonym: R. K. Lemmons-Weber), featured in the LEO magazine (July issue), PWN International Certified Marketing, Branding, and Image Coach, and former 2007 MFA student. I currently reside in Louisville, KY with my husband and six (soon-to-be seven) children. I graduated from Spalding University's undergraduate program in 2004, with double bachelors in Communications and Psychology. I later attended three graduate schools in the pursuit of my degrees in the areas of: Social Work, MFT in Counseling (Marriage and Family Therapy), and MFA in writing and teaching (Masters in Fine Arts). I enjoy philosophy, research, biblical studies, quiet moments of reflection, writing, and spending time with my family.
